Embracing Diversity, Preventing Bullying and Violence

Project Trips

A wide-angle photograph of a coastal town built into the side of a steep, green hill. A winding road cuts through the hillside, leading towards the town. The town itself is a cluster of white buildings with colorful roofs. The town is situated on a cliff overlooking a deep blue sea. The sky is clear and blue.

WORDS TO REFLECT ON

Embracing diversity, preventing bullying
and violence

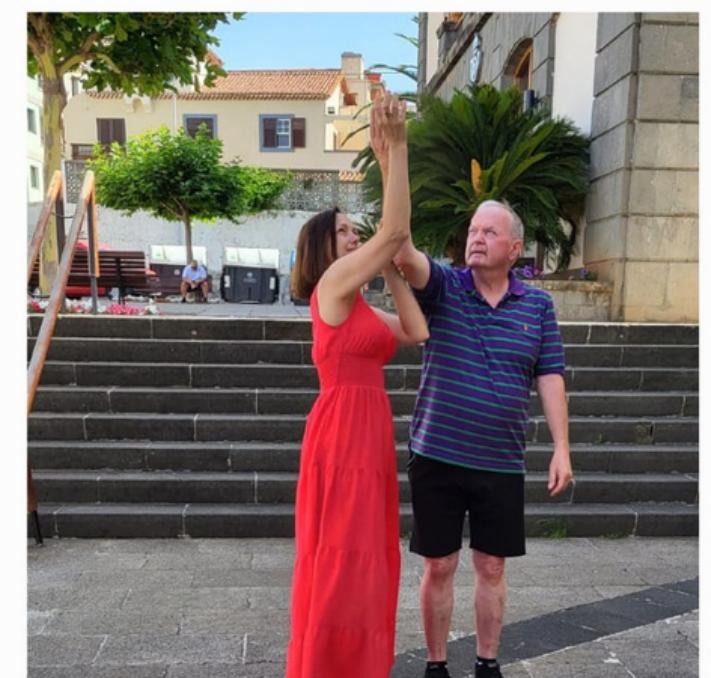

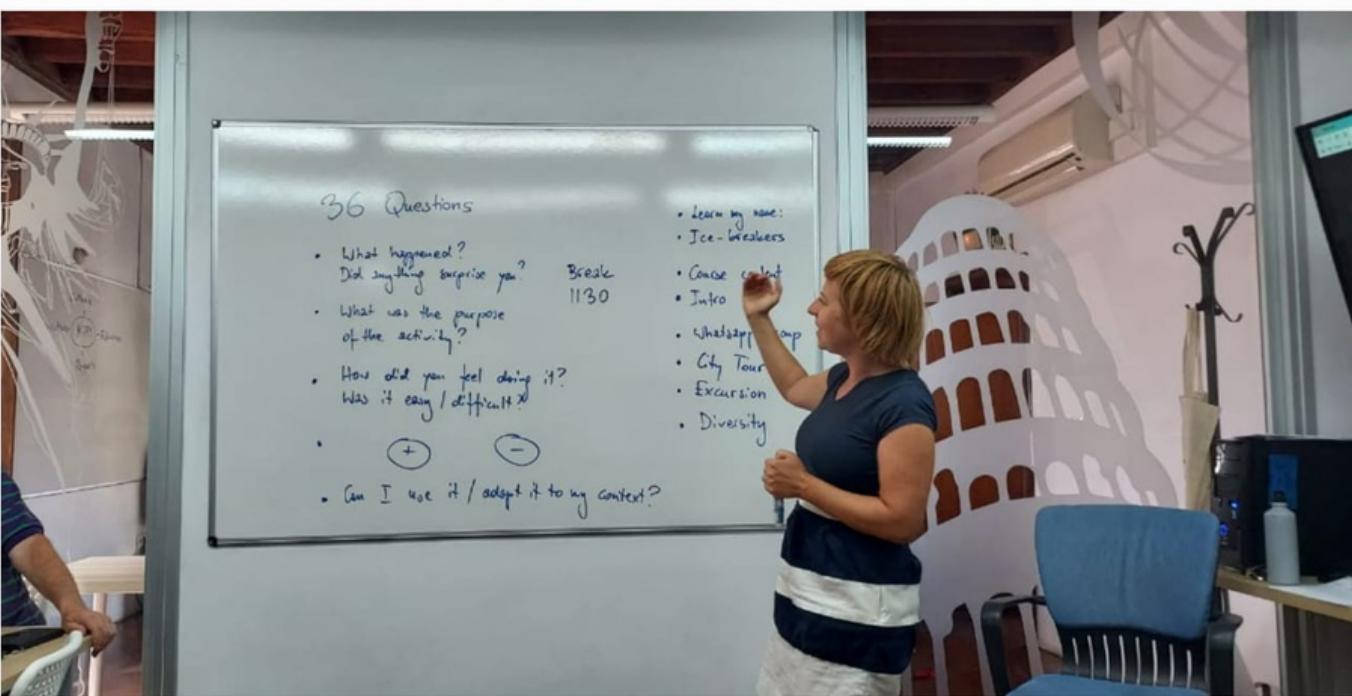

All European schools differ from one another, but at the same time, they struggle with similar issues. Among these, it seems that discrimination and bullying are some of the most diffused and dangerous problems. Not only can they have negative effects on learning, but they can also lead to long-lasting, sad consequences that can affect the students throughout their whole life.

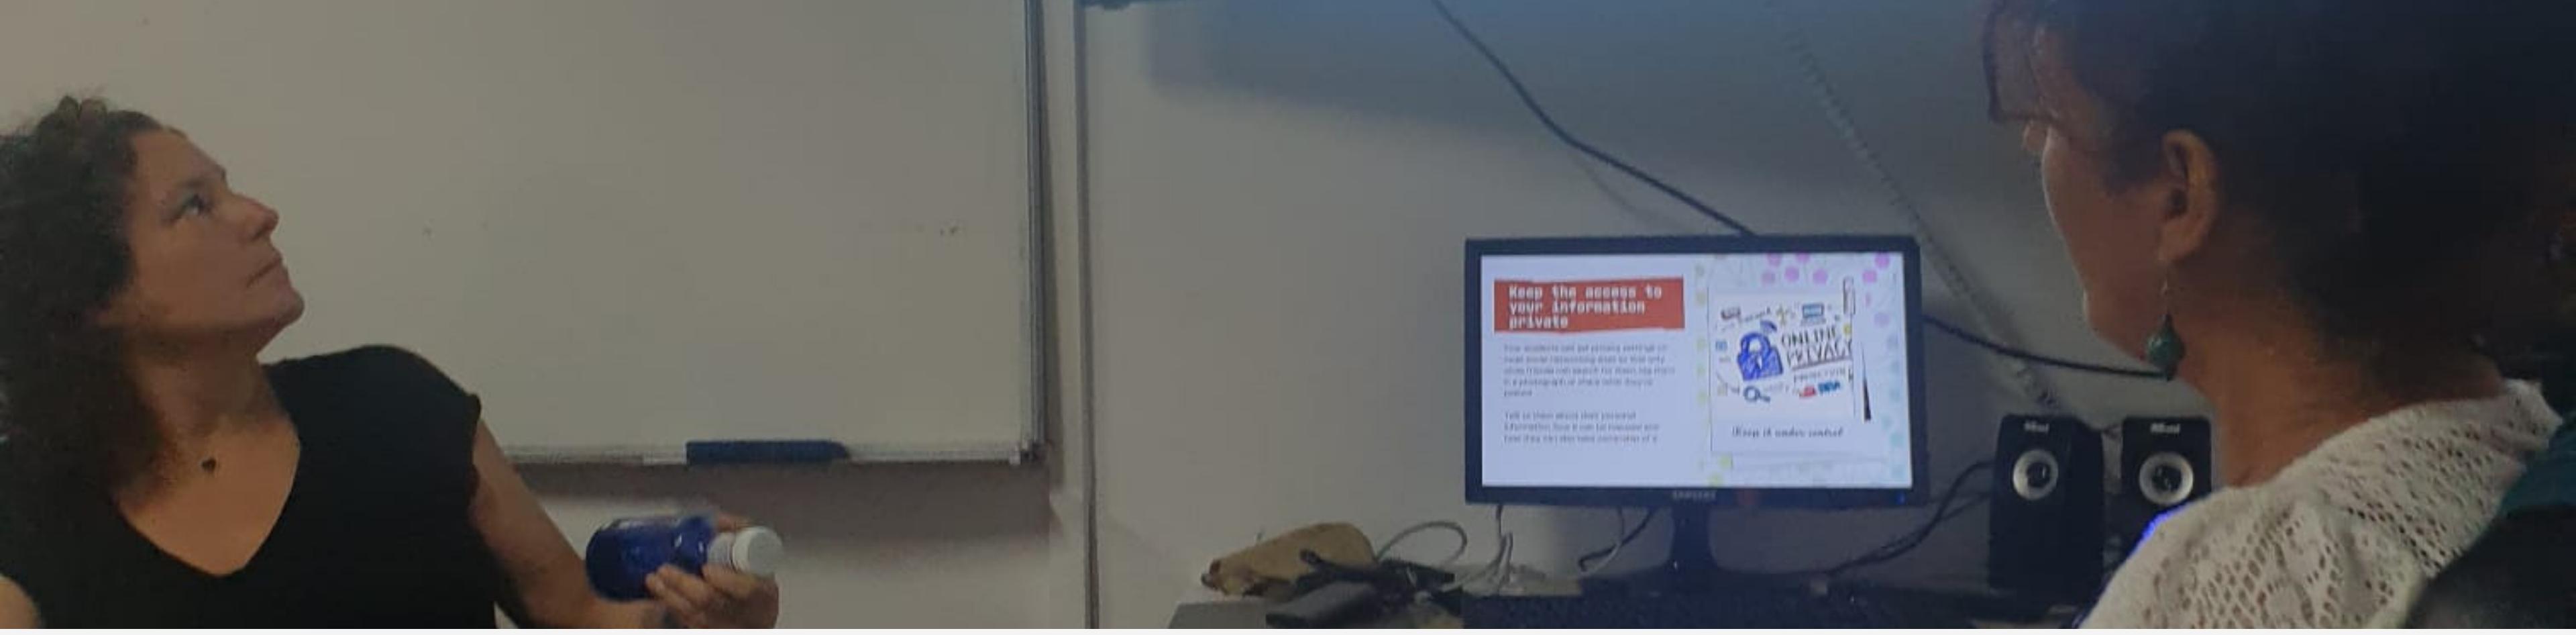

The increasing diffusion of problems connected to discrimination and bullying in schools should not make teachers feel weaker. On the contrary, if staff get together, observe real scenarios, and combine their strengths, they can set up effective strategies to improve educational processes, with small steps being taken every day. By the end of the training, participants will have deeper insight into the dynamics underlying discrimination and bullying in schools. They will also have developed skills and practiced methodologies to prevent conflicts, manage emotions, and foster a better and healthier school environment.

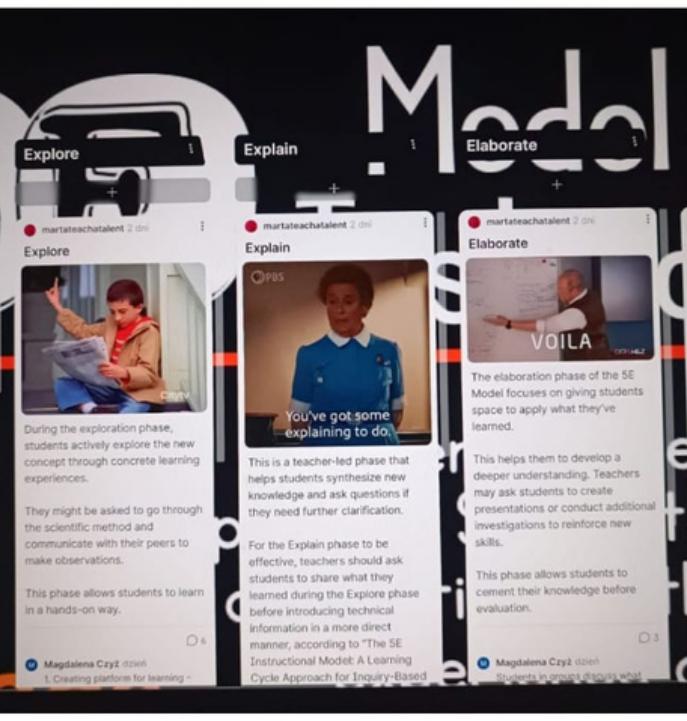

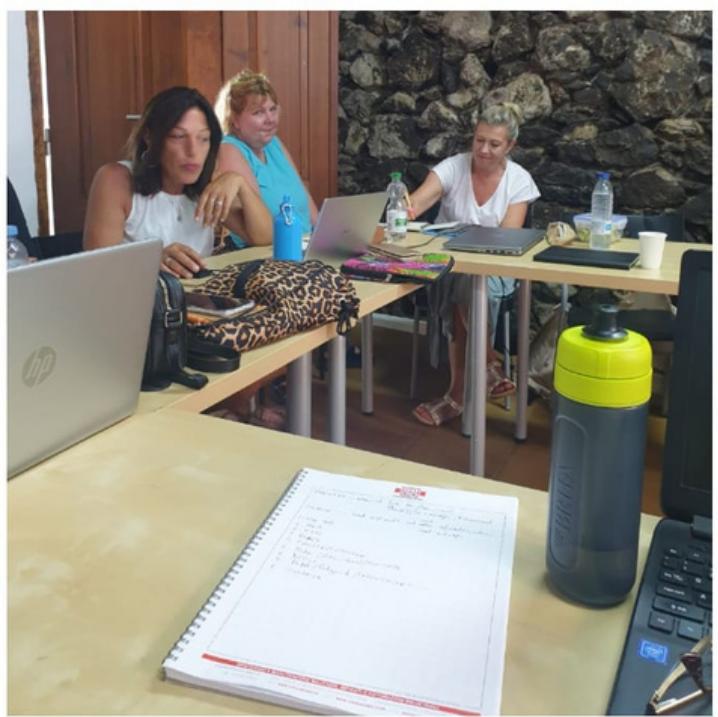

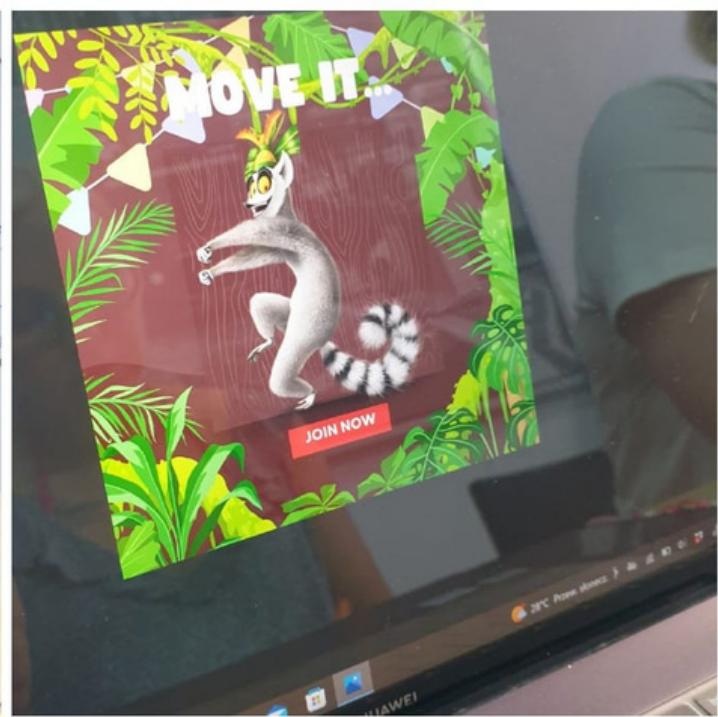

Social Media in the Classroom

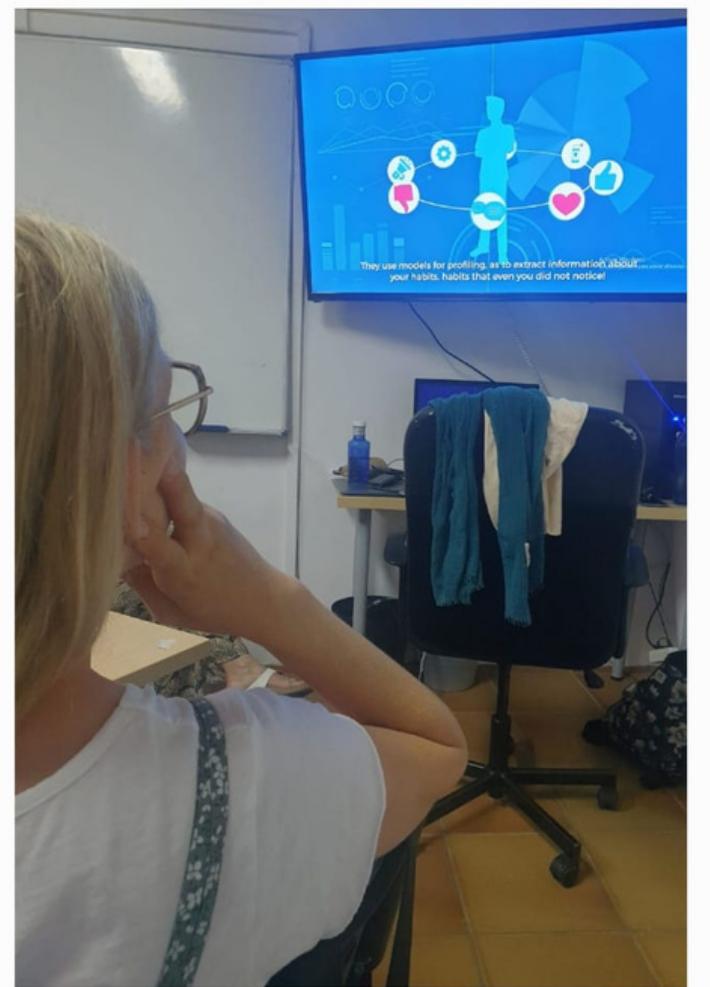

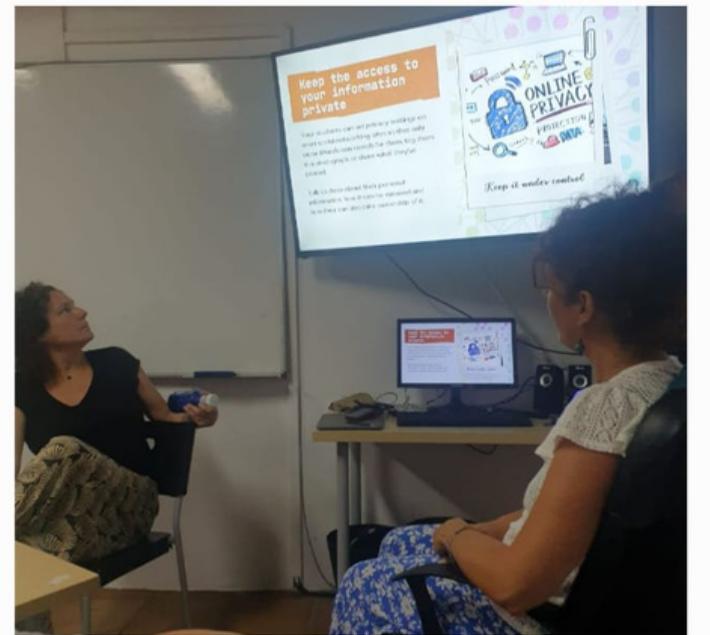

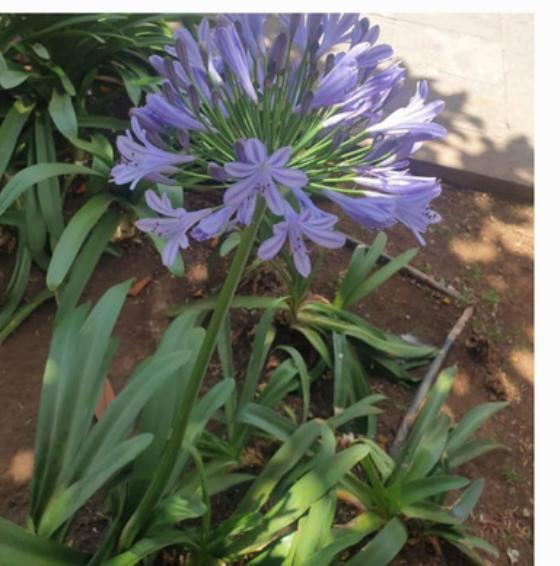

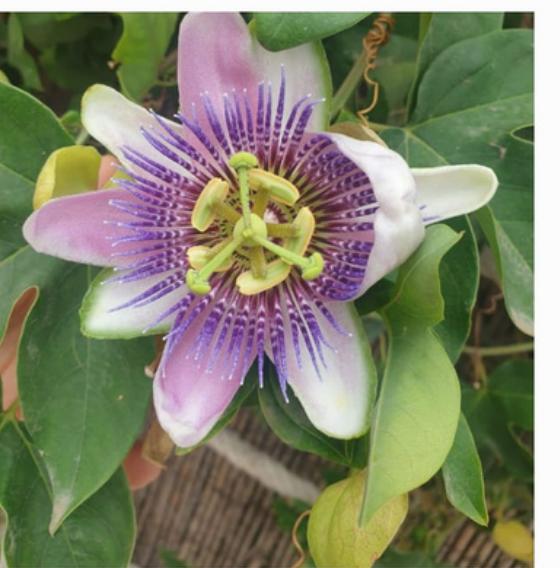

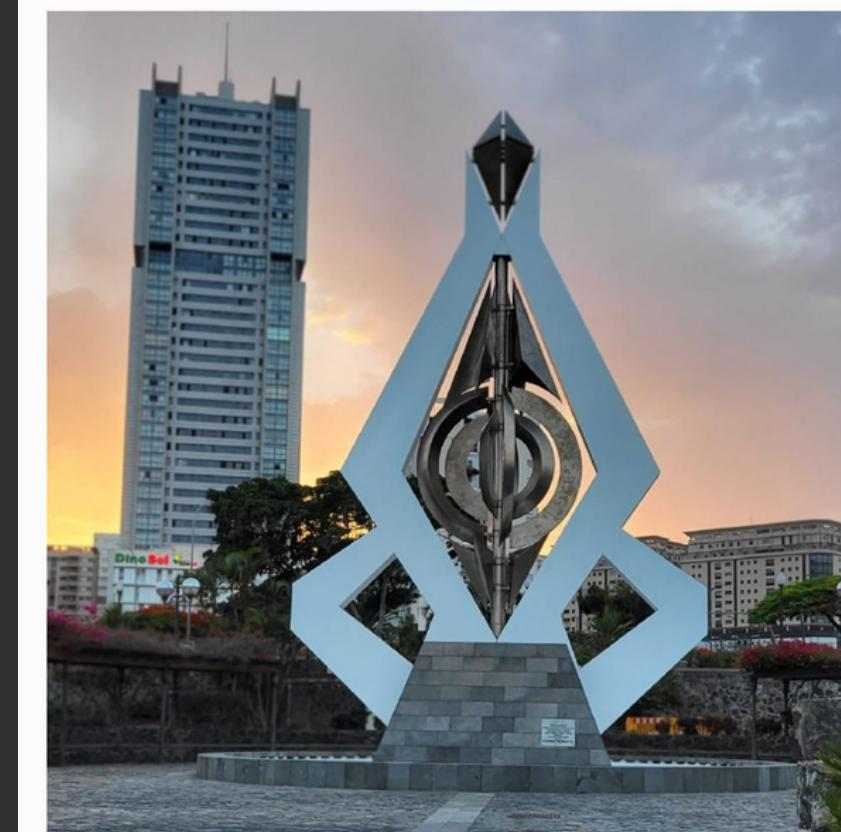

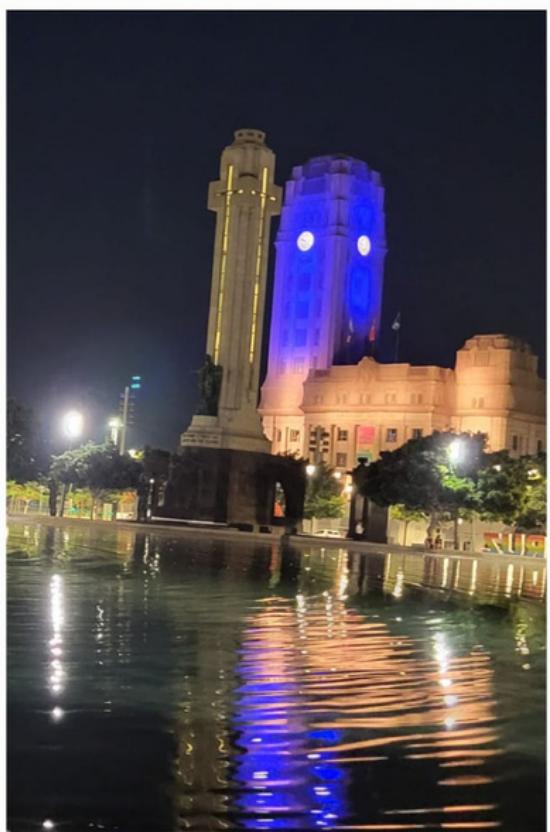

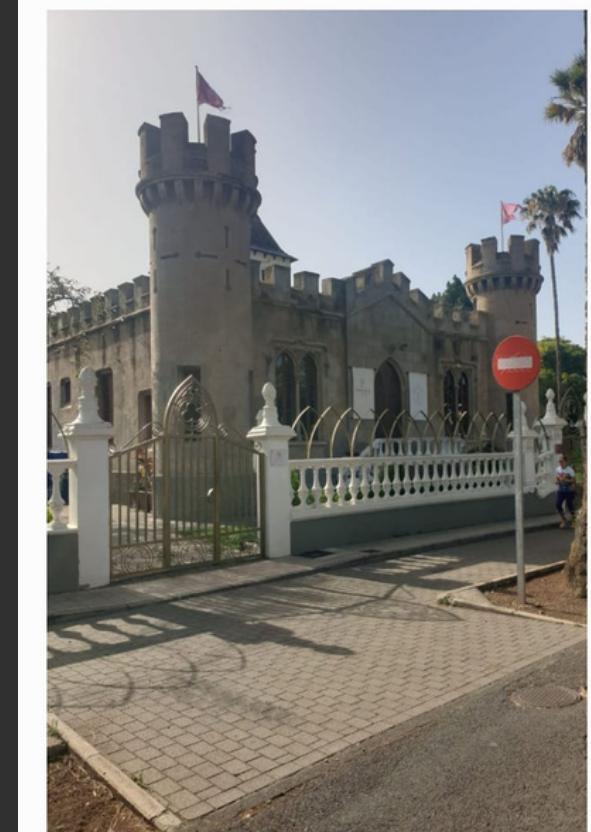

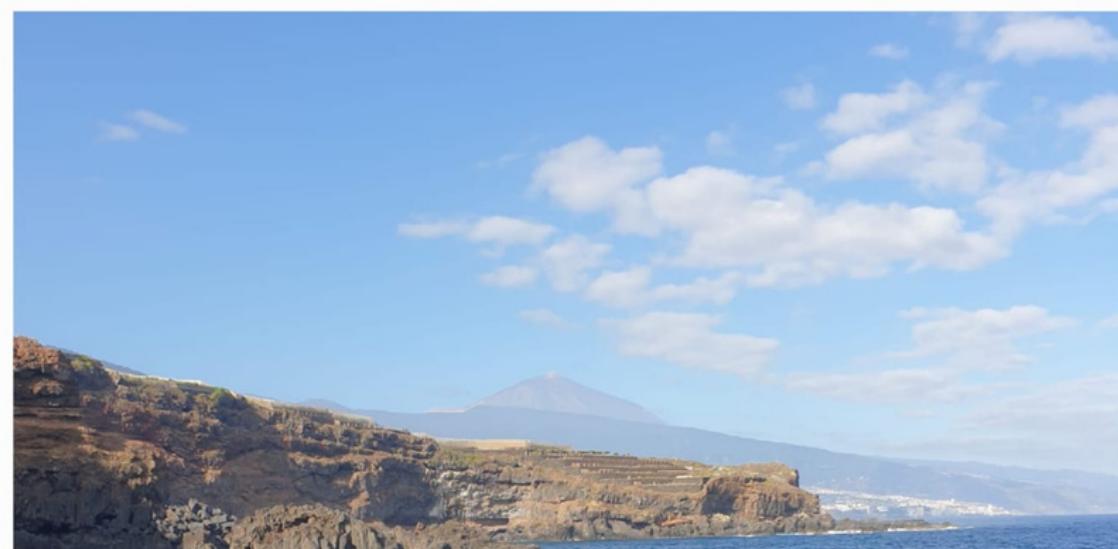

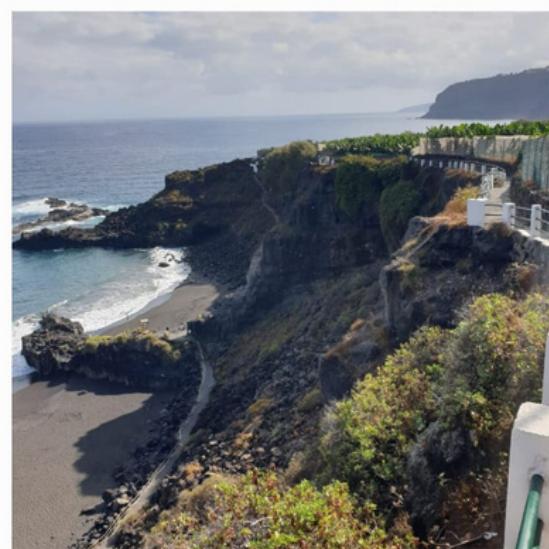

The course has been created for teachers who want to learn about social media and its application in the classroom. Participants will learn about incorporating social technology into their lessons and will participate in activities in small groups and pairs. Emphasis will be placed on the most popular social media, and on their potential in educational settings. Teachers will be provided with a wide range of practical teaching activities to enable them to make their classes more effective and enjoyable. Teachers will also learn about the safe use of social media, student versus teacher roles, and digital classroom management.

The course is taught through a combination of short theoretical presentations followed by practice activities, through which the participants will get familiar with the various platforms and techniques covered. By the end of the course, teachers will have acquired more knowledge about using social media as an educational tool to enhance student engagement and improve communication among students and teachers.
